

WILLING, MORRIS AND SWANWICK PAPERS

Willing, Morris and Swanwick, Philadelphia mercantile house, succeeded the early Willing, Morris and Company (organized in 1754 by Thomas Willing and Robert Morris), and carried on business generally throughout the period of the American Revolution.

Members of the firm were

Thomas Willing (1731-1821)
Robert Morris (1734-1806)
John Swanwick (1740-1798)

THOMAS WILLING participated actively in the civic and political life of Philadelphia for many years. He was in 1764-1767 a member of the Provincial Assembly of Pennsylvania, in 1767 a justice of the Supreme Court of Province. In 1765 he signed the Philadelphia non-importation agreement directed against the Stamp Act. In 1774 he was President of the first Provincial Congress of Pennsylvania, keeping in touch with the First Continental Congress, and in 1775 he was a member of the Second Continental Congress. When, two years later, the British occupied Philadelphia, he refused to take the oath of allegiance to King George III. In 1781 he was chosen President of the newly organized Bank of North America, and was subsequently responsible for the success of that institution during the economic depression of 1785-1785 and the "bank war." A supporter of the movement for the Constitution of 1787, he became in 1791 President of the First Bank of the United States and continued in that office until 1797. Then retiring from that Bank, he remained active in business until 1807, by which time he had augmented his estate to the value of $1,000,000.

ROBERT MORRIS, member of the mercantile house from 1754 to 1793, was during that 39-year interval its most active director. In 1765 he signed the Philadelphia non-importation agreement. In 1775 the Pennsylvania Assembly made him a member of the Council of Safety, and he continued in that membership during 1776. In September, 1775, the Secret Committee of Continental Congress contracted with his firm for the importation of arms and munitions; and in the same year he was elected to serve in the last Pennsylvania Provincial Assembly.

In January, 1776, he was appointed member of the Committee of Secret Correspondence of the Continental Congress, and his firm continued importing supplies for the then-forming Continental Army. In August, 1776, MORRIS signed the Declaration of Independence; and, when in December of that year Congress fled from Philadelphia, he continued there, carrying on the work of the Secret Committee. In 1777 this committee was re-named, first the Committee of Foreign Affairs, then the Committee of Commerce, Morris continuing with it and frequently serving as its banker. In 1778 he signed the Articles of Confederation, and in August was made chairman of the Congressional Committee on Finance, to serve in that capacity until November. In 1781 he was chosen by Continental Congress to be Superintendent of Finance, in which office he remained until 1783. During that same interval he was one of the heaviest subscribers to the Bank of North America, an institution aided into being by a timely loan of $200,000 in specie brought in by the French fleet. He participated in the Constitutional Convention of 1787, and was a member of the United States Senate, 1789-1795.

JOHN SWANWICK, son of a Philadelphia loyalist, was himself a supporter of the cause of Independence, a gentleman interested in literature, and the author of a volume of poetry. Letters indicate that he was particularly active in the firm from 1784 to 1786. In the 1790's he was elected as a Democrat to the 4th and 5th Congresses of the United States, and he served from March 4, 1795, to the time of his death in 1798.

The papers of the WILLING, MORRIS AND SWANWICK Company are chiefly associated with the firm as a unit or with ROBERT MORRIS or JOHN SWANWICK individually, none of the papers emanating from THOMAS WILLING exclusively. Largely they represent correspondence with TENCH TILGHMAN AND COMPANY, merchants of Baltimore, Maryland, or with JONATHAN HUDSON, merchant of the same city. Among them are occasional papers associated with ROBERT MORRIS' career as Superintendent of Finance and in similar capacities.

They embrace folders as follows:

WILLING, MORRIS AND SWANWICK PAPERS*

A..Folder 1: Mercantile Correspondence

ROBERT MORRIS, chiefly from Philadelphia, to JONATHAN HUDSON, Merchant, Baltimore, 1774 and 1777-1781

Morris' letters, beyond an occasional allusion to Continental Congress and eminent figures of the day like Washington, Benjamin Harrison, Jr., and General Nelson, are concerned with transactions in such commodities as wheat, flour, bacon, pork, beef, salt, tobacco, loaf sugar, powder, brimstone, flannels and blankets. Various trading houses in New England, Maryland and Virginia, including two in which Morris held partnerships, Jonathan Hudson and Company and Peter Whiteside and Company, are referred to; arrangements for the payment and transfer of gold, currency, drafts, and the like are announced; boats, sloops, ships, brigs, schooners, engaged in coastwise shipping or trade with the West Indies and with Europe are mentioned with owners' and officers' names; There is an occasional reference to Morris' deep absorption in public business, but predominately the matter of these letters is private trade.
