

It was with some difficulty that I was enabled to ascertain the location of William Kenly's Warrant. the description being ^{so very} ~~so~~ indefinite and no claim of that name known nor any person of the name ever known in the County 2 miles North West of the Two Licks. the land also North Westerly of the two licks for a number of miles round being very good, and surveyed about the years 1771-2.3.&4. it required a strong effort of the mind to believe it belonged to any particular spot on the terrestrial globe, and neither my time nor the fees allowed, would permit an excursion to the moon to see if it could be found there, I had therefore to set my imagination to work and endeavor to enter into the feelings of this man Kenly when he conceived and brought forth the description contained in the said Warrant. I had accordingly to ~~set my imagination to work~~ myself encamped with Genl Armstrong at the Two licks for a week, then marched North Westerly towards Kittanning, thought of nothing but fighting Indians in blood to my knees, untill I came to a branch of Two lick creek about 2 miles from the said licks. here being a choice piece of land I concluded I would secure ^{it} some time for myself. After my return, some time elapsed before I took a warrant, when upon reflection - being unacquainted with the country, could think of no other description than that contained in the said wart. After this course of reasoning and reflection I concluded if it was intend for any place in this world it was that upon which I have laid it.
